COMMENT OF THE DAY

Educating The Resettled

WHEN the report of a single sitting of the Urban Council can occupy up to 14 columns in a newspaper, as did yesterday's meeting, the public are vividly reminded of the extraordinary extent to which the Council's activi-Hes have been enlarged, as well as the heavy call on the time of the Councillors in dealing with what have now become manifold problems relating to public welfare, health and sanitation.

In view of this many will feel some surprise that one member yesterday urged further responsibilities for councillors by their appointment to committees outside the Urban Council but with affairs which deal which are to some degree interrelated with the work of the Council. The publicspiritedness which motivates the proposal wins acclamation, but it does seem that if implemented it would imposo severe additional demands on Councillors, who could, in any event, only report back, and absorb more of the Council's time in explanations and answers to questions. Not unthe officials expectedly refrained from opposing the motion on the clear understanding that the Council would not be able to debate decisions by Government-appointed boards and committees with which the UC obtained liaison. the many questions

Uraised at yesterday's meeting none produced more Illuminating and significant replies than those relating to sanitary defects in resettlement blocks. The existence of dirty toilets, it was explained, was due firstly to insanitary habits of the dwellers, secondly to thefts of parts of the flush system, thirdly to inadequate supply of flush water. Dirty drains are largely caused by persons throwing refuse into them, and similarly this helps to cause perpetually wet washing places. disclosures clearly

Indicate the urgent need for education in health and sanitation among the people, previously squatters, who now occupy the resettlement flats. That provision welcomed by the public generally and if Governfeels that estimates have to be pruned. the axe should certainly not be applied in this direction. It is pointless to resettle squatters in reasonably decent flats if they are not at the . same time taught how to look after them and to appreciate their new living facilities. ## Buraimi Dispute Saud Urged

To Re-open Diplomatic Relations

Washington, Feb. 5. King Saud of Saudi Arabia has been urged by United States officials to re-open diplomatic relations with Britain in a new attempt to settle the Burami Ossis dispute, an authoritative source said today.

Buraimi was on the agenda of the talks which President Elsenhower and King Saud held at the White House last week.

Saudi Arabia broke off diplomatic relations with Britain, as well as with France, on November 6 as a result of the Anglo-French attack on Egypt.

United States officials were said to have discouraged King Saud's suggestion that the dispute might be brought before the United Nations.

ON ACENDA

Buraimi was placed on the agenda of the White House talks at the insistence of the Ring, but President Eisershower took the position that it was fundamentally a dispute between Britain and Saudi Arabia and should be solved without direct United States intervention, according to a highly placed source here.

Britain and Saudi Arabia have been in dispute for years over Buraimi, a cluster of potentially oil-rich onses in the East Arabian Desert.

Britain, which assumes responsibility for foreign and defence affairs for shelks and sultans along the northern and eastern shores of the Arabian Peninsula, has charged King Saud with financing a competen of subversion in an attempt to oust Britain from the region.

United States officials told King Saud, who is to meet President Eisenhower later this week, that if diplomatic relations were resumed, Washington then would try to bring the two nations together again for new talks. Reuter.

Unemployment Problem In Poland

Warsaw, Feb. 5. A growing unemployment problem in Poland has been made more acute by the whole dismissing of civil servants, it was officially stated in Warsaw today.

A national conference was told by Mr A. Tuzzyniski, director of a special commission, that the urgent unemployment problems were caused by three factors: the Government's present drive against superfluous people in the administration, the continuous inflow of Polish repatriates from Russia, and the number o graduates from universities and secondary schools.

The Minister of Labour, Mr A. Zawadzki, said that cutting the "overgrowthe" in the administration would involve the reeducation and re-employment of many thousands of men and

McTaggart's Fight With Tommy Byrne—Virtually An Olympic Final

By ARCHIE QUICK

Nothing could have better illustrated the brief period which is a boxer's time of glory than the International match between England and Ireland at the Royal Albert Hall, London.

It is a few short months since the England team won fame and returned in triumph from the Olympic Games at Melbourne, but the parade of Champions was but a thin red line, other week he said that his it hit the middle of the bat! the old accuracy of pass missing, I am, to be perfectly honest, looking forward to the end of the senson so that I can give it a summer's rest."

That statement tells its own story of lack of confidence, yet Haynes is still the keystone for England's forward line against Scotland at Wembley in April and for the FA's Continental tour in May, To be as candid as Haynes was, I think Eddie Bally, of Notts Forest, at 32 years of age is, currently at least, a fifty Africa. per cent better footballer than the unsure Haynes.

Fullpam's Mr Frank Osborne told me: "Our worry for some American naval officer. time had been our defence. TRUSADING certainly is a tough business. Look what happened to that football emancipator James Guthrie, the Abe Lincoln of the Soccer slave mart.

He got the old heave-ho because he was too tough for the Soccer bosses. I know that since Guthrie went into the Football Association and Football League conferences without the old cap-In-hand and by-your-leave approach he has been a marked man.

Oh! Mr Cullis .... don't YOU call in the cops

ONE football boss not amused is Freddie Cox, of Bournemouth. U In fact, he is distinctly angered by suggestions from Wolverhampton that his players strong-armed their way into the fifth round of the Cup.

He is entitled to be angry. Wolves calling Bournemouth a bunch of toughles is as ludicrous as the late world Heavyweight Champion Mr Rocky Marciano hollering: "Ref, this my ain't read the rules book."

Earlier last month I watched slightly appalled at the manner in which Wolves pounded Tottenham Hotspur into a 3-0 defeat.

At the time I was compelled to mention that Wolves were tough . . . iron hard . . . grimly determined. They were, in fact, a collection of football furies. I did add that for all the power tackling they hurled against Spurs, they were never rough.

Much as I admire Mr Stanley Culls and rate him as one of the greatest-ever managers, I respectfully suggest that Wolves should be among the last clubs to shout: Call the cops, the party's getting rough!

favourable calculations put the cost of foodstuffs and other household goods in Panama City about 30 per cent above the prices prevailing in the Canal Zone.

Those losing their right to purchase in the commissaries darkly slate Panamanian products, protected by prohibitive turiffs against imported competitive lines, are sorry substitutes for the United States name brand products featured by the commissaries.

United States makes efforts to accede to Panama's requests and avoid any appearance of bullying the small Republic.

Panamanian citizens who are employees of the Company and who are losing their commissary privileges (and, in the case of 900 of them, their jobs) suggest that the United States should pay more attention to the many individuals whose cost of living is now suffering a sharp upswing, and less attention to the few merchants whose stores will handle the 13,000,000 dollars' worth of extra trade.

EMBITTERED

The Panama Canal Company has slightly raised the wages of its locally-engaged employees to provide some compensation the change. But many workers still feel that the "Great White Father" in Washington has delivered them either willingly or by trickery into the hands of Panama's merchants.

While Panamanian Government spokesmen make Out a for their country's right to diminish commercial competition the non-profit Canal whose purpose is really only to put ships through the Panama Canal as expeditiously as still greater Œ possible, contional issue turns on the commissary privileges of about 4,000 retired Canal Zone employees, including some 800 United States citizens, who now live in the Republic of Panama.

The great majority of these 4,000 live on marginal pensions, and undoubtedly counted on shipping at commissary prices for the rest of their days.

Particularly, embittered are the United States citizen pensioners who, having spent their working years in govern-ment service, now suddenly find themselves excluded from United States Government

A-Shelters Proposed In America

Washington, Feb. 5. Navy atomic experts today proposed construction of a nationwide underground atomic shelter system. They estimated the cost might be 20,000 million dollars, but said the system would offer survival for a high percentage of people in the event of nuclear attack.

The suggested shelters, of three types, would range from structures designed to protect only against radioactive fallout to thickly walled affairs designed both against famout and heavy blast. The latter type of shelters would be designed for densely populated areas.

Panamanians Lose Privileges 15th Century Prague Inn To Put On Floor Show

Prague, Feb. 5. A 15th century inn here, which Czechs claim is the oldest inn in the world, is to put on a floor

U Flek was nationalised six years ago. Thirty-one private owners, seven of them women preceded the take-over. have their names written golden letters on an oak door In the inn. The street outside is named after the first owner, Vit z Kremene.

The brewery has not changed its recipe since 1499. The present manager of the brewery. Jaroslav Pacina, says that he refused to disclose it several weeks ago to a delegation of West German brewers who from beer-drinking Bavaria to ask for it.

13 DEGREES

At 13 degrees alcoholic con- boxes on his tray. tent, the beer is one degree stronger than the world-famous Pilsener, another Czechoslovak brew. Its strength, it is said, comes from mixing, in secre proportions, four kinds of malt caramel cream, roasted and 250 grammes of white hops for each hectolitre.

Pacina, a tall, jovial, 56year-old grandfather, employs three browers.

U Flek cannot sell its beer outside the inn, or export it because it is not pasteurlsed and will not keep in temperatures of over 48.2 degrees

After seven weeks' brewing drinking halls. The beer is

The inn, called "U Fleld", has | pumped through the floor in a own brew of black beer ever duction of 2,040 gallons a week since 1499. Extended and modernised at students, workers, policemen, various times through the ages, housewives and other Czechs

MEETING PLACE

Before World War II, U Flek was Prague's favourite meeting place for artists, poets and writers, who gathered in a special back room called the "Akademio." Here, each had his seat, with his name and portrait above it. Now the Akademie is often hired by government ministries for conferences at which civil servants ponder policy oven huge mugs of black

One former frequenter of the Akademie is still a legendary figure in Prague today-an old beggar who died in 1939. Each night, the beggar used to sing and sell matches in the smokefilled room, to the roars of drunken artists. When the beggar died, 60,000 crowns, a large fortune in those days, were found beneath the match-

One hall, the Melnie, where hops and barley used to be stored in the early years of the inn, is decorated with paintings of Bohemian castles. Another room is called "The Sausage" because of its long and narrow

In the Knights' Hell, the largest drinking room, revellers sit round a 230-year-old grandfather clock on chairs which bear the arms of the 62 leading breweries of Bohemia and Slovakla-the two states which made up modern Czechoslovakia -at the turn of the century. This hall was used for conferences of brewery owners. Each brewer sat on the chair which bore his arms,

ORIENTAL AIR

As part of the latest renovation, most of the floors are being relaid, three of the halls are to be linked by new pastages, and many of the walls will be repainted. In the process too, several carrielabres, which bear a hammer and sickle design, are to be removed. These were put up in 1950 by the first manager of the im after nationalisation, a fervent Communist Paradoxically, the removal of these candelabras was ordered by the Communist Party itself—on the ground it was inappropriate that the party emblem should look down nightly on often wild drinking

The exterior of the inn has a strange Oriental air, with red and green tiled sloping roofs and a small minaret overlooking the courtyard. In ornate cloisters, old stone sculptures depict customers, of former times, including monks, in various stages of drunkenness. One shows an irate woman trying to prevent her drunden husband from entering her bedroom through the windows Another shows a smiling St Peter welcoming a brower with extended arms—to illustrate the old Czech saying that those who make good beer must go to

U Flek claims that it has never closed in the five conturies of its existence, not even in the noisiest moments of the various wars which it has survived.

The inn was also the scene of an all-time Czech drinking record. In 1908, a Prague butch-er, in a marathon bout, swallowed 127 half-litre (just less than one pint) mugfulls of beer in 24 hours—for a bet.

50 MUCS DAILY

M. Pacina says some of his guests can still easily drink 50 muge a day, though, he laments, more and more Czecha are turning away from beer to drink wind or hard liquor. One customer regularly drinks soven litres at beer, he adds

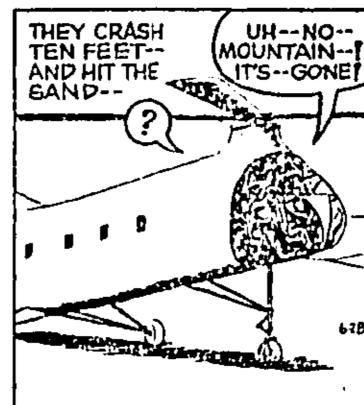

The inn's golden book bears the aignature of famous people of many nationalities. One recent guest, it reveals, was the Mayor of Peking. Poems in German, Spanish, English, Russian, Scrbo-Croat, and even Japanese testify the approval of many a foreign guest after an evening's session at the inne-China Mail Special.
